II. The Challenge

Your mission: help Rocket Arena price its best-selling concession items for upcoming third-party shows.

- Event Grouping: Group or tier past shows by what drives Guest spending.
- Demand Forecast: Place each upcoming show into one of your groups and project how many units of each top item it will sell.
- Variable Pricing: Recommend prices for the five best-selling items that flex by group.
- Stakeholder Visual: Build a dashboard or chart a business leader can understand in seconds.

III. Key Tasks

Explore the show, audience and concessions files.
Join them and find what separates a show where water and pretzels fly off the shelves from one where cocktails lead the way.
Build your groups (clusters, tiers or rankings) from the historical shows.
Explain your rules clearly enough that someone else could place a brand-new show into a group.
Assign every show in upcoming_events.csv to one of your groups and forecast units sold for each of the five overall top items.
Recommend a price for each of those five items by group. Show which items should flex, by how much and why, and estimate the effect on units and gross sales.
Design a visual that sums up your findings and recommendations for a non-technical audience.
Tell the concessions story your way. Creative approaches are welcome.

- We can make a database using common columns to combine tables
- Performer demographics profile connects with performer demographics meta and upcoming data, with performance id
- Concessions connects with historical data and upcoming data with event id
- Make an interactive dashboard as the final deliverable that can tell you what to sell at what price given the event and concession
- Check the performance demographic meta data to see the total number of people who went to
- Find the optimal price point to maximize revenue for each of the five concessions

Groupings

Family night event and sports
Family show events where most of the buyers are men or sports events. Where men are the main buyers

Family day event
Any family show that does not fit where men are not the main buyers

Bar category
Rock and country

Social events (Everything else)

Findings from Upcoming events

- Repeat performers P03, P06, P19